A Celebration of Newham Volunteers

Sarah Beaumont
Head of Governance Services, The Education Space

National Volunteers' Week closed with a celebration of Newham Volunteers in Plashet Park on Saturday 3 June 2023, which included a celebration of the work of school governors and trustees.

On the stage, long-standing School Governor with many years of service, Cllr Neil Wilson, spoke of the role of Governors being strategic leaders in schools. He recognised the valued work of those who contribute as governors and trustees, who form a significant volunteer workforce in the borough, contributing to the outcomes of children.

Sarah Beaumont, Head of Governance at The Education Space, spoke of there being around a quarter of a million school governors, making up the largest volunteer group in the country. She referred to the presence of a strong support network for governors, saying that Newham Partnership Working (NPW) - The Education Space had been set up by schools to provide support services to schools, and that this included support and training to governors.

Sarah also paid tribute to the work of the active Newham Governors' Association, chaired by Ellen Kemp.

Cllr Jane Lofthouse, herself a long-standing School Governor, worked tirelessly throughout the day to promote and recognise the work of school governors and trustees, and to encourage those who may be interested in undertaking the role.

Events throughout the day included speeches by volunteers of varied fields, fun and games on the many stands publicising different volunteering organisations and lively and entertaining dance by Shpresa Albanian Line Dance, China, and Dave Dance's Zumba class.

Many thanks to all those who visited the School Governor stand and to the organisers of the event headed by Alison Mitchel, Volunteer Coordinator, for a very successful and enjoyable day.

Interested in becoming a School Governor / Trustee?

If you are interested in becoming a school governor or trustee, please get in touch to find out about the role and how you may apply. The contribution of governors and trustees can make a difference to the future of children and young people in our schools. Governing boards are responsible for taking important decisions that enable schools to improve and develop. Governing boards work closely with their headteachers, who are responsible for the day-to-day management of their schools.

Commitment and common sense are important qualities that governors bring to their schools - you do not have to have formal qualifications or experience in education, finance or management, although these skills will always be welcome.

To be an effective governor you need to:

- Have an interest in education, schools and young people;
- Be able to listen to other people's views, to discuss them and then to form your own judgements;
- Be willing to support the decisions taken by the whole governing board;
- Have time to play your full part in the work of the governing board;
- Be willing to learn.

How Newham Schools are Saving Time and Money on Their Hiring Process

Technology has changed the way schools approach everything they do in and outside of the classroom. Educators and school staff are more tech savvy than ever before, yet the hiring process has remained tedious and time consuming, not to mention expensive.

The need for qualified and reliable supply educators is paramount, and schools often face challenges when trying to quickly fill temporary teaching positions. Traditionally, recruitment agencies have been the go-to solution, yet a new and innovative approach has emerged: using tech to streamline hiring. And that's how Opogo supports schools.

Opogo's mission is to keep educators in education. As a social enterprise they create a real, positive social change in the teaching industry by reinvesting profits to build innovative, effective technology that meets the changing demands of schools and educators – and give it to them for free.

The platform offers a unique, streamlined and cost-effective approach to supply cover. With the simple booking system, schools can find the talent they need in just two clicks. The school takes back full control of who is working with their pupils, with full visibility over qualifications, experience and profile.

"Having said I rarely need supply last week was one of those crazy weeks when I needed someone every day! We had 8 teachers off on one day, which is unheard of."

The platform was really great. It is easy to use and I could use it anywhere”.

Nia Silverwood, Deputy Headteacher, Elmhurst School.

However, supply cover and hiring processes are not the only issue facing schools and their staff. Teacher retention continues to be a significant challenge within UK schools, posing a pressing issue for the education system. A combination of factors contribute to high turnover rates among educators, namely workload pressure from increasing administrative tasks, marking and lesson planning, leaving limited time for professional development or work-life balance. Opogo seeks to address this problem by empowering educators through CPD and an educator-led community called Learn.

Overseen by Phil Denton, a former headteacher and author of the bestselling book 'The First 100 Days', Learn is a comprehensive platform of unique courses, webinars and opportunities for development. Deep dive into the pillars of SEND, subject specialisms and classroom practices and receive certificates to recognise the time and commitment put in. Learn serves as both a powerful resource for educators in supply work that use it to get new opportunities, as much as it supports full time educators to stay at the top of their game.

The partnership between The Education Space and Opogo is already saving 30 schools across Newham time, money and supply issues, whilst upskilling permanent and temporary staff with free CPD courses.

If you would like to see it for yourself, start by joining the Learn platform (for free) and reach out to Alex.Matthews@opogo.com to get your school up and running.
